DECMIL AWARDED FURTHER WORK AT ROY HILL

- Approximately $40m in structural mechanical and underground services work for Roy Hill EPC, Samsung C&T
- Adds to existing Decmil port, rail and fuel projects underway
- Extends good relationship with Roy Hill

Decmil Group Limited (ASX: DCG) ("Decmil") is pleased to announce the award of approximately $40m of additional work at the Roy Hill Iron Project ("Roy Hill").

The work, which will be undertaken for Roy Hill EPC, Samsung C&T, includes various underground services such as installation of conduits, pits, fire water pipework and HV cable. It also includes a variety of structural mechanical work on the train load out facilities and tailing and desanding systems. The works include the erection of structural steel, mechanical equipment and piping, electrical and instrumentation works; and the provision of crane services.

The new work complements Decmil's three existing port, rail and fuel infrastructure projects currently underway for Roy Hill. Those projects continue to progress well.

Scott Criddle, CEO and Managing Director of Decmil, said:

"We are pleased to expand our presence at the Roy Hill project. Our existing projects there have progressed well and our relationship with Roy Hill and Samsung C&T is strong.

Decmil has a long track record in the Pilbara delivering iron ore infrastructure and we have expanded our capability over the years to cover construction, civil works, fabrication and structural mechanical projects.

We look forward to undertaking this additional work for Samsung C&T and assisting with the overall progression of the Roy Hill project."
